LIKELY TO SUSTAIN VETO OF LIQUOR BILL

Belief That the House Will Vote to Uphold the Governor in the Position He Has Taken.

The expected happened when Governor Carter yesterday sent in his veto of the liquor bill. The expected will happen again today when the veto will be sustained.

That is to say, the veto will be sustained in the House. Of this there seems little doubt. It is claimed, in fact, that the veto would have been sustained in that body yesterday, but for a misunderstanding that arose among the opponents of the measure. It was because of this misunderstanding that the consideration of the veto was postponed, it is said, and not on account of any desire upon the part of statesmen who have the good of the Territory at heart to perpetuate this iniquity on the statute books.

It was said yesterday by men who had canvassed the situation pretty thoroughly that there were not less than twelve members of the House who would vote to sustain the veto—and that this number would be increased to an actual majority when the time came to vote. Indeed, there were enthusiasts who claimed that two-thirds of the members of the House would vote to sustain.

As to the Senate—well, there is a certain uncertainty. The Senate may, and it may not sustain the veto. It postponed action yesterday until this morning, but as the liquor bill is a house rather than a Senate measure, although the Senators did things to it that altogether changed its identity, this postponement may have been merely out of deference to the House. It was said about the Capitol yesterday afternoon late that the Senate would sustain the veto also—but there were no Senators who said so.

The veto message, a remarkably strong document, follows in its text:

A MESSAGE.

To the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii:

Herewith, I return House Bill No. 168, entitled "An Act to Regulate the Manufacture and Sale of Intoxicating Liquors, Repealing Chapter 103 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii," which I am unable to approve.

This Bill illustrates what remarkable legislation can be produced through misunderstanding and lack of a thorough comprehension of a measure before it is passed.

It practically removes all reasonable restrictions from the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor. Saloons may be started anywhere by any person other than a minor or a woman, with the exception that they cannot be located within 150 feet of any school or church.

It does away with the recent features of high license, which in a measure confines licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquor to those who are at least financially responsible. This measure more than cuts the present license fees in half.

It allows for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, other than wine, for a period of fifteen years, on the payment of a fee of ten cents a gallon for every gallon manufactured, payable monthly. Thus those who are anxious to see the Legislature make provisions for a possible industry do not obtain what they desire, as this tax is practically prohibitive.

It provides also for the sale of intoxicating liquors in hotels having five rooms or more, under a license of $250.00 a year. The definition of a hotel is such that the saloon keeper, instead of paying a $500.00 license, would prefer to operate a "hotel," with a $250.00 license.

The proposed law provides, as to the revocation of licenses, that the Treasurer may revoke licenses upon conviction of the licensee of a willful violation of the provisions of the Act. No other method of revocation is provided for. The Bill does not state what a willful violation of the Act is, nor is it specific in stating who is to determine whether a violation is willful or otherwise. If a licensee is brought into court on a charge of violating his license, the ordinary procedure is to find him guilty or not guilty, and it is hardly likely that a court would say whether he is willfully guilty or otherwise.

G. R. CARTER,

Governor.

Executive Chamber, April 18, 1905.

The Governor yesterday received a petition signed by hundreds of citizens asking him to veto the liquor bill. The petition, in fact, was the most bulky that has been received by the executive concerning any measure considered by the present legislature.

Yesterday a petition was circulated among the drug men of town who are also interested in the liquor bill in that they must be licensed to sell alcohol and its preparations for medicinal purposes.

ANIMAL INTELLIGENCE.

Incidents Proving That Fishes and Insects Have a Memory.

Many arguments are made, some affirming that animals, fishes and insects have memory, others that they do not. Among the former Herr Edinger, the German anatomist, relates that a young schoolgirl kept a fine, large caterpillar in a box and fed him carefully on choice leaves. At first when it was necessary to remove him he immediately curled himself when placed upon a leaf. But in a short time, learning that no harm was intended, he remained stretched out. Whenever a stranger touched him, he at once curled himself as before. A civil engineer at Courmelles-Sur-Mer asked a workman why he kept a great number of oysters on a delicacy as they were dry at low tide. He replied that the oysters were being "educated" before being sent to Paris, and taught to economize water in their shells. Oysters immediately from the water are said to open on the road and arrive at their destination, dried out, dead and spoiled. If they are first placed where they are alternately under water and high and dry, they realize in a few days that they will experience discomfort if they open under the latter conditions. When they learn to wisely retain the liquid they are sufficiently advanced to pass their examinations in Paris. The historic carps in the pond of the castle at Fontainebleau will pass a piece of apple thrown to them in disdain, feeling assured they will never be able to masticate it, but will wait with great patience while the hardest bread becomes soft in the water, knowing by past experience that it will soon be in a condition to serve for their food. All this is held to be proof that these creatures possess a memory.

A VIEW TAKEN ON THE DECK OF THE RUSSIAN BATTLE-SHIP "PERESVIET," IN THE HARBOR AT PORT ARTHUR.

At the time of the surrender of Port Arthur the Russian fleet in the harbor included, in addition to many smaller vessels, the battle-ships "Retvisan," "Poltava," "Peresviet," "Pobeda" and "Sevastopol," and the cruiser "Bryan." Nearly all of these had been seriously damaged by Japanese shells during the siege, and just prior to the surrender they were blown up and sunk by the Russians in an effort to prevent their being of any service to the Japanese. After occupying the city, however, the Japanese officers made an official inspection of the vessels, and reported that the damages to some of the ships could be repaired. A conservative estimate of the value of the war-ships which Russia has lost during the war is $80,000,000.
